The seining business must be a profitable one when the proprietors can buy and operate steamboats.

So far during April there has h little done in the way of salmon fishing. The cold rains have contributed among other causes to make the run exceedingly scant and it has hardly paid to put out the gear. With one exception every cannery is taking fish, but the average is hardly four to the boat since the first. salmon was canned last April, despite the strike, up to date, than there has been this spring.

It was Shakespeare who said that "he who lays hands upon a woman, save in kindness, is a wretch whom it were gross flattery to call a coward," and every generation since has said that William had a remarkably level head when he took his pen in hand to write them thar lines. A case in Justice Cleveland's office brought the idea to mind. It was the complaint of Mrs. Johnston, wife of N. J. Johnston, of Manhattan, who bore on her poor bruised body the evidence of her husband's cruelty, and who brought into court abund ant evidence to prove that he had beaten her in such manner and under such circumstances as justified the magistrate regretting as he fined him $50 and costs, that there was no whipping post provided for the adequate punishment of that most degraded of all creatures-the "man" who beats his wife.

Sociable at Mrs. Capt. Reed's.

There will be a children's sociable at the residence of Mrs. Capt. Reed on Friday afternoon, the 22nd inst., from half-past three o'clock until seven. During the evening the sociable will be continued for the pleasure of the young people. Cake and ice cream will be sold. The proceeds will be given for the benefit of the Episcopal Sunday school. Will the members of the guild and the teachers of the Sunday school kindly give their usual donations?

While in the city I had the pleasure of witnessing their celebration of this night, and to one not over fastidious it is one of the most interesting sights ever seen. About eleven o'clock at night I went to High street where there were forty or fifty thousand people assembled, filling the streets as far as I could see. The crowd was so dense as to almost Army posts throughout the country prevent one from getting through it and no vehicles of any description were allowed on the streets. The sight was as wild and weird as differor on the shortest road to that condition. The drinking was not confined to the men alone, but young and old women, little boys and girls all alike were engaged in the celebra-tion in the fullest sense of the word. Those who were not already too drunk were shouting and singing as time in the year, while here and there were squads of men and women apparently, though in an unanimated way, trying to SQUEEZE EACH OTHER TO DEATH By locking hands, forming a circle lately to a friend: "If they go on with a few women in it and then dito prosecute me I will make it hot for minishing the size of the circle, and them." carried on in a much smaller though vanished, and I think Dante must have at some time in his life been in Edinburgh on Hogmanay. from that of other cities. I left this city with many regrets, for their universities, libraries, muse-ums and hospitals are the fixest in the world. The Scottish people are as sociable as ever found any where, and then for a student Edinburgh has many attractions. But life is short and I left for London on my way to the continent.

smoke and fog were so dense as to stop all vehicles from running, though the street lamps were lighted all the day. It was so dark I was almost afraid to venture out on the streets for fear of losing my way. In the houses the gas was kept burning all day long, but even with this aid, reading was both difficult and disagreeable. The smoke crept into the houses and rooms through every crack and crevice, smarting the eye irritating the throat and making everything so dark and gloomy that life to me was like a horrid drean following a late supper when crab salad had been partaken of too freely In the morning I might go forth adorned with clean collar and cuffs and by noon I would look as if I had been at work for a week in a coal mine. But it takes dirt to make a world, and London is a world by it-self. Here no large gatherings such as are seen in Edinburg or Hogmanay are ever allowed, for a crowd in Lon-don means a riot. And though London has its weekly riots in spite of all police precautions, yet there is this good thing about them, one does not hear of them until they are over. I am quite sure that they COULD HAVE TWO OR THREE BIOTS In different parts of the city in one day and one half of the inhabitants would not know of it until reading their paper the next morning. The city is so large that the east end knows no more of the west end—nor as much as they would-than if they were two separate cities. To me, London is a wonder. With its immense wealth, unequaled poverty, magnificent hotels and theaters, grand museums, hospitals and libraries, lovely parks and handsome pal aces, it is, indeed, a world by itself. Everything the world produces is found here and here are to be seen people from every nation and clime. He refused tempting offers to remain in Lon-don, and goes to his native home in India where, on account of his superior learning and ability, he will doubtless at once take a prominent position in his profession, as well as be a leader in politics in which, he informs me, are questions of increasing importance arising every day, and that England, ere long, will have an Indian question as well as an Irish one, which will require the highest order of statesmanship to successfully meet. He also informed me that a great many of his countrymen are at present coming to England for the purpose of study. Not alone for the professions, but for science, art, engineering, etc., and what is just as interesting, that nine out of ten of them who are not married when they come here soon succumb to the charms

Catarrh in its destructive force stands next to and undoubtedly leads on to consumation. It is therefore singular that those afflicted with this fearful disease should not make it the object of their lives to rid themselves of it Deceptive remedies concected by ignorant pretenders to medical knowledge have weakened the confidence of the great majority of sufferers in all advertised romedies. They become resigned to a life of misery rather than torture themselves with doubtful palliatives.

But this will never do. Catarrh must be mot at every star, and combated with all our might. In many cases the disease has assumed dangerous symptoms "the bones and cartilage of the nose, the organs of hearing, of seeing and of tasting so affected as to be useless, the uvala so clongated, the throat so inflamed and irritated as to produce a constant and distressing cough.

SANDAD'S RADICAL CURE moets every phase of Catarrh. From a simple head cold to the most loathsome and destructive stages. It is local and constitutional. Instant in relieving, permanent in curing, safe, economical and nover-failing.
